

YACHTSMAN CLARK MARRIED AGAIN.

Social Light of New London Takes Mrs. Grace Wilson, of St. Louis, as His Bride After Divorce.

Louis Vaughn Clark, a member of the New York Yacht Club, whose residence is at New London, Conn., was married to Mrs. Grace Wilson, of Manhattan, at King's Chapel, Boston, by Rev. Henry Woude. Mrs. Wilson's residence here was in West Ninety-third street.

On May 17 last Mr. Clark's former wife, who was Miss Edith L. Draper, obtained a decree of absolute divorce. They had been separated by mutual consent for two years previous. Before that they were members of the Regatta Colony, at New London, and were socially prominent.

Mr. Clark is a wealthy merchant of New London. He was at one time in command of the New London station of the New York Yacht Club. At one time he owned the yacht Algonquin and now owns the forty-footer Gossamer. He is a member of the Metropolitan Club in Washington.

A Mrs. Grace Wilson, widow of Henry P. Wilson, lived at No. 30 West Ninety-third street. The house is closed for the summer, and neighbors say Mrs. Wilson returned suddenly last week, opened her house for a few days, seemed to be busy shopping and then left again, taking her servant and her twelve-year-old son with her.

She has no acquaintances in the neighborhood, but the rumor got abroad that she intended to be married again.

Mrs. Wilson is a handsome woman, tall, dark and of a dignified appearance. She is under thirty-five years of age.

Mrs. Edith Draper Clark, the former wife, lives at The Lancaster, No. 41 East Tenth street, but she is out of the city. She received $120 a month alimony. Mrs. Clark obtained her divorce on testimony given by one of Mr. Clark's friends.

HORSEMAN'S WIFE GETS A DIVORCE.

Mrs. Charles Weiland Secures Decree from Owner of Fred W. and Other Well-Known Pacers and Trotters.

Mrs. Melanie Weiland, wife of Charles Weiland, the well-known owner of trotting and pacing horses, has been granted a divorce by Justice Gleason on statutory grounds. The divorce proceedings were instituted with the greatest secrecy and only became known to-day.

Mrs. Weiland named an "unknown" co-respondent in the case. It was referred to Referee Wilbur McBride, who recommended on the testimony that a decree be granted Mrs. Weiland.

Charles Weiland is in the hardware business at No. 149 Chambers and No. 151 Reade street and owns a magnificent home at No. 47 West One Hundred and Fifty-second street. He is the owner of the big bay pacing gelding Fred W., one of the fastest horses on the Speedway. Mr. Weiland is seen generally every morning on the Speedway driving one of his fast horses. He has participated in some of the hottest races there, and his horses are usually winners.

ACTRESS NAMED IN FALES DIVORCE.

Margherita Arlina Hamm Fales Produces Letters in Her Suit and Is Granted an Absolute Decree.

An absolute divorce has been granted by Justice Dickey, of the Supreme Court, in Brooklyn, to Margherita Arlina Hamm Fales from William E. S. Fales, the magazine writer.

May Gillespie, an actress, was named as the co-respondent, letters said to have been written to her by Fales being introduced as evidence.

Mrs. Fales lives at No. 94 Pineapple street, Brooklyn. She married Fales on Oct. 14, 1882, in Jersey City. There are no children. Fales, who is a lawyer as well as writer, appeared as his own counsel at the hearings before Alexander S. Rowland, to whom the case was referred by Justice Marston on July 14.

8 POLICEMEN ACCUSED OF NEGLECTING TO PAY PROPER ATTENTION TO A DEAD CAT.

Arraigned at Headquarters on Complaint of Indignant Neighbors Who Thought the Nasal Evidence Strong Enough to Warrant Action.

"I reserve my decision."

How many of his five senses must a policeman exercise?

It is up to Deputy Commissioner Thurston to determine whether eight patrolmen attached to the West Sixty-eighth street station are to be punished for failing to discover that an extremely dead cat reposed in a vacant lot in West Sixty-eighth street, near Central Park, from July 16 to July 18, to the annoyance of the neighborhood.

John Toomey, John Kennedy, Michael Slattery, Michael Connor, John Beldinger, Thomas Culhae, John Kelleher and Alfred La Rue are the policemen charged with overlooking the deceased feline. The complaint against them is made by Capt. Keen, at the instigation of

All on account of Ellen.

"WAS THE GAS HOUSE EXPLODED?"

"I didn't see no cat."

"You didn't have to see it."

"I think not," answered the witness.

"A theory that might have been entertained with more reason was that a subterranean outlet from Hunter's Point had come to the surface in the lot."

"Then you admit," said Policeman Culhae, "that there really was no direct evidence that there was a dead cat in the neighborhood, that the evidence might indicate almost anything from a slaughter-house to a national calamity, and that a policeman, unable to analyze the evidence, might be justified in thinking, perhaps, that a sewer was getting busy."

"I admit nothing of the kind," was the reply. "I contend that inasmuch as there was unmistakable evidence that something was dead around there it was the duty of the police to find out what was dead and report it to the persons responsible for its removal."

"How high is the grass in that lot?" asked Policeman La Rue.

"I should say it is three feet high in places," answered Mr. Chandler.

"Do you think it neglect of duty for a policeman to fail to see the remains of a cat in grass three feet high?" continued La Rue.

"It wasn't necessary to see it," retorted the lawyer with a cheerful grin.

Deputy Commissioner Thurston said he was familiar with the neighborhood and would reserve decision.

Nobody knows how the cat got into the lot. None of the residents of the neighborhood will admit that they lost a cat by death at any time during the month of July.

But the cat was there.

Everybody appeared to know it was there except the eight policemen who pass the spot on their rounds.

The presence of the corpse could almost be felt," said Lawyer Chandler.

"Many of the residents of the neighborhood were driven to cigarette smoking in self-defense. We had to shut up our houses and go into Central Park to breathe. Through it all the policemen

ROMANTIC BRIDE TRIES SUICIDE.

Mrs. Farrell, Who Took Poison, Once Masqueraded in Boys' Attire and Was Twice Wed.

Nellie Farrell, the comely young bride who hovers between life and death at New York Hospital as the result of her attempt to kill herself with poison, is the heroine of a singular romance.

She was an Indianapolis girl, one of the prettiest in the Hoosier capital, when, as the daughter of Thomas Smith, a well-to-do citizen, she ran away to make her fortune four years ago.

She was not yet sixteen when she fled from her home. Before going she went to a barber shop and had her luxuriant hair cut close to her head and trimmed after the fashion of boys, so that she could part it on the side. Then she bought a suit of boy's clothing and donned it.

She had started for Evansville, but before the river packet arrived the girl in boy's clothing was taken ill, and when the boat tied up at the wharf she was bundled into an ambulance and trundled off to the hospital. There her sex was discovered and she was induced to confess. Her father was sent for, and when she recovered she made no objection to returning home with him.

Two years ago Miss Nellie became enamored of a horse trainer named Oliver McMakin, and in spite of her father's pleadings she became his wife. Last July she was made a widow by her own father, who killed McMakin. Smith was arrested, but was completely exonerated on the preliminary hearing, the evidence showing that he killed McMakin in self-defense.

Two months after her first husband was killed Nellie Smith-McMakin, still in her teens, was wooed and won by young Farrell, the devoted husband who hangs about the hospital, anxiously awaiting the outcome of her attempt on her life, which he says was the result of brooding over the death of her baby.

PRESIDENT'S QUIET DAY.

Had Two Guests at Luncheon—Lawn Tennis with Children.

OYSTER BAY, L. I., July 31.—President Roosevelt spent a very quiet forenoon at Sagamore Hill to-day. After going over the morning correspondence with Assistant Secretary Loeb the President played a few games of lawn tennis with the children.

The only visitors were Adolph S. Ochs and Stanford Newel, United States Minister at The Hague, who were the guests of the President at luncheon. So far as known no guests are expected at dinner at the President's house this evening.

For Men's All-Wool Flannel Suits. Regular $8.50 to $10.00 Values. For Men's All-Wool Flannel and Serge Suits. Regular $12.50 to $15.00 Values.

The reasons are—First—Because of the extraordinary economy involved. Second—Because of the very high character and excellence of the garments. Such values as are told of in this announcement must naturally invite favor for the house that proffers them. Their genuineness is recognized at a glance—their worthfulness will therefore be fully comprehended.

Wide distribution of such superior clothing means so much to us—and saves so much to you. These garments are suitable for both present and early fall wear; they accordingly serve a two-fold purpose—the rounding out of the summer days and the beginning of the autumn ones.

The $6.50 Suits are of strictly all-wool flannel, in neat and stylish patterns. Cut, fit and finish are such as will find the approval of critical dressers.

The $7.50 Suits are strictly all-wool flannel, crash or serge. They are garments that will assuredly give the very highest satisfaction. Their superiority in style and cut shows at once—and their fit is as perfect as one could desire.
